Concentrations in Sociology

Students majoring in Sociology have the option of either selecting one of 4 concentrations areas, or majoring in Sociology without choosing a concentration. The concentration consists of a minimum of 12 credit hours, or 4 courses. The 4 concentrations are:

- Crime, Law and Justice
- Health, Medicine and Aging
- Gender, Work and Family
- Social Inequality

Gender, Work and Family Concentration

Traditional conceptualizations of work and family were as separate spheres---one public, one private. During the past several decades, however, changes in the shape of the economy and families have encouraged sociological exploration of the permeable boundaries between these two institutions that shape and give meaning to our lives. This concentration provides an opportunity to explore the changing realities around gender, work, family and sexuality and understand their consequences for individual experiences and the public sphere.

How have downsizing, declining wages and increasing work hours influenced families, in particular the increasing number of one-parent and dual-earner families? How does location in the occupational structure affect the strategies available to families providing care to young, elderly or disabled family members? How do couples negotiate the division of household labor? The courses in this concentration challenge assumptions that balancing work and family obligations are individual responsibilities. Instead, attention is directed to the hidden inequalities in paid work and to the imbalance between market and nonmarket activities. Students will also explore the ways in which gender structures our experience of work and family in different ways depending on ethnoracial status, social class, age and sexual orientation.

Required Core Courses:

12 CREDIT HOURS

SOCI 101: Introduction to Sociology

SOCI 300: Modern Sociological Thought

SOCI 306: Logic of Social Inquiry
