Concentrations in Sociology

Students majoring in Sociology have the option of either selecting one of four concentration areas or majoring in Sociology without a concentration. A concentration consists of a minimum of 12 credit hours (four courses). The four concentrations are:

- ◆ Health, Medicine and Aging
- ◆ Gender, Work and Family
- ◆ Policy, Law, and Crime
- ◆ Social Inequality

Social Inequality Concentration

Over the last several years, social inequality in the United States has been increasing; at the same time, many of its consequences are becoming better understood and its causes vigorously debated. Topics that will be studied in the various courses in this concentration include the following.

Why are social class differences so robust even during periods of rapid prosperity in an open society? Why is the unequal distribution of resources across gender and ethno-racial groups so resistant to change? Why is there such a strong connection between social position and health? What are the effects, and who is most affected, by sharp downturns in the economy? Inequality inevitably cuts across the social institutions of work and family, education, medicine, law, and other aspects of contemporary society.
