The Schubert Center for Child Studies enjoyed another year engaging in dialogue, providing education, overseeing research, and influencing policy for the improvement of child well-being. We explored the “Impact of Inequalities on Childhood” through our conversation series and additional lectures; organized another cohort of undergraduate students to learn about federal policy in D.C.; oversaw the completion of a community-based research project; and assisted in the incorporation of developmentally-informed policies. We welcome you to explore our interactive annual report, describing our activities throughout the year, and encourage you to visit our website for more information.

During the 2017-2018 academic year, we will be celebrating our 20th anniversary and hope you will be able to join us for an all-day event on April 27, 2018 titled “Cleveland: A Community Committed to Our Children.” Thank you for your ongoing support of the center’s work!

WELTER-MUZIC FELLOWSHIP
Childhood Studies Minor Brittany Rabb was awarded a Welter-Muzic fellowship to attend the American Sociological Association's 2017 meeting.

FREEDHEIM GRADUATE FELLOWS
Freedheim Graduate Fellow Jennifer Birnkrant researches risk and protective factors in the development of anxiety and depression in LGBTQ youth.

Freedheim Graduate Fellow Hannah McKillop researches the development of depression in children and the role family factors may play.

EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING
Four undergraduates were part of an advanced, hands-on child policy course funded by the Mann Endowment. They met with federal agencies, legislators, think tanks, stakeholder associations, advocacy groups, and others in Washington D.C. to better understand how public policy is shaped and to research specific policy issues, including child health care, K-12 and preschool discipline, and child trafficking.
Ensuring public policies that impact young people are informed by an understanding of adolescent development and well-being is at the forefront of the Schubert Center’s policy efforts.

House Bill 410 was signed by the Governor and went into effect in 2017 to address truancy and called for the State Board of Education to develop a model discipline policy that stresses preventative strategies and alternatives to suspension or expulsion. SCCS has offered recommendations for model discipline policy guidance and resources.

To advance positive interactions between youth and police and promote developmentally informed policies and practices, a sample memorandum of understanding for school resource officers (SRO) was developed in collaboration with partners to clarify the roles and expectations of SROs.

A Citizen’s Guide to the Cleveland Consent Decree was also created to help young people, in particular, better understand and engage in Cleveland police reform.

The Mental Health Response Advisory Committee policy subcommittee co-chaired by Policy Director Celeste and Judge Gallagher facilitated the adoption of CLE police crisis intervention policies that include developmentally appropriate protections for children.
In a peer-reviewed study, that is now in press, conducted by faculty associates of the Schubert Center for Child Studies at Case Western Reserve University, Kids Love Musicals! was associated with statistically significant gains in eye contact, turn-taking, lesson engagement, social awareness and emotional understanding, which are all measures of social-emotional skills. These results highlight the advantages of having students with special needs engage with arts education.

Research for the Westside Community House (WSCH) Wrap for Success Program has continued. A database is being created to assist in tracking questionnaire data for parents who participate in the Wraps4Success and ACT parenting classes. A publication regarding the studies’ findings is being completed.

Schubert Center oversaw the publication of the first collection of research on Ugandan child maltreatment written by Ugandans, Child Abuse and Neglect in Uganda (Springer 2017), edited by David Kaawa-Mafigiri and Eddy Walakira.
