Master of Arts in Cognitive Linguistics

at Case Western Reserve University

This two-year program, hosted by the Department of Cognitive Science at Case Western Reserve University, provides students with a background in the study of mind and language and supervised thesis research with leading figures in the field of cognitive linguistics. Alumni have gone on to top PhD programs in cognitive science, linguistics, and communication sciences, and to careers in fields like computer science, marketing, and research.

Program Faculty:

- William Deal
  Cognitive science of religion and ethics, cognition and culture, Buddhist theory of mind.

- Fey Parrill
  Co-speech gesture, psycholinguistics, experimental methods, viewpoint and social cognition, teaching and learning.

- Vera Tobin
  Viewpoint, pragmatics, joint attention, cognitive biases, and cognitive approaches to language in literature.

- Todd Oakley
  Semiotics, discourse analysis, rhetoric, attention, autism and intersubjectivity.

- Mark Turner
  Blending in language and communication, multimodal construction grammar, Mind and Media.

For more information, visit http://cognitivescience.case.edu/graduate/master-of-arts/

Apply before May for admission in the Fall term.